Your Hydro One Electricity Bill
GST & Debt Retirement Charge Exemption

Status Indians, Indian Bands and Band Councils are exempt from paying GST and the Debt Retirement Charge (DRC) for electricity purchased for use on an Indian Reserve. DRC collected to pay down the stranded debt of the former Ontario Hydro. For most customers in Ontario, the DRC is 0.7 cents per kWh. DRC is calculated based on the amount of electricity used, so it varies from one bill to the next.

Here's information about GST and DRC refunds and how to make a claim.

How do I claim an exemption?

In order to claim GST and DRC exemption, you'll need to provide us with the following:

- Name on Hydro One account
- 10-digit Hydro One account number
- Account address
- Indian Status card number

Call our Customer Communications Centre at 1-888-664-9376 for help.

How will I receive my refund?

We will apply a credit on your bill, once you have demonstrated that you are eligible for GST and DRC exemption.

GST refund

We can only refund GST for the current calendar year.

For any refunds prior to January 1st, complete the GST form – General Application for Rebate of GST/HST (GST189). To obtain this form, visit the GST office or get it from the Canada Revenue Agency's website at www.cra-arc.gc.ca or call 1-800-959-5525.

DRC refund

We will refund DRC for the period it was charged in error. We started collecting the DRC when the electricity market opened to competition on May 1, 2002.

PRESS RELEASES

We are very excited to invite one and all to a Book Launching Party!

"WHAT WE HOLD DEAR:" Treasured Memories of Alderville First Nation by Ruth Clarke and members of the community.

It is Ruth's fifth book and her second volume of Alderville's history; the first, Before the Silence: Fifty Years in the History of Alderville First Nation 1825:1875, was published in 1999 and depicted life for the Mississauga Ojibway during those fifty years, including their migration from Grape Island in the Bay of Quinte to their settlement in Alderville.

In photos and narrative, WHAT WE HOLD DEAR resumes the story in the late 1800s and continues to present-day life in Alderville. It continues in the style of BEFORE THE SILENCE, written from the point of view of fictional characters.

Two women figure prominently in WHAT WE HOLD DEAR. Aged but spry Kathleen Franklin, or Gate-gan as she is called, and Katie Chase, her great-granddaughter, narrate the story. The two women are at home alone for a month during the summer when Gate-gan gives a trunk full of what she holds dear: photographs, newspaper clippings, university papers, recipes and memorabilia that she has collected throughout her lifetime, to Katie. As they go through the contents of the trunk their stories and lore become threads that weave a rich textured history of Alderville's past and recent history. Though Gate-gan and Katie are fictional characters, all that the two women discuss throughout the book is factual.

Members of Alderville First Nation share the by-line on this book in which they have either written chapters or provided information or photographs.

In 1953, Mary Jane Muskrat Simpson completed a manuscript, LIFE ON THE LAKE, from which chapters have been excerpted and enhanced with photographs from Peterborough Centennial Museum and Archives of paddleboats, steamers and riverboats that once plied the Kawartha Lakes. Dave Mowat, great-grandson of Fred Simpson, the marathon runner who ran in the 1908 Olympics, wrote an essay celebrating his ancestor's illustrious career. Research that Melody Crowe and Arlene Beaver conducted in 1981 during a summer project appears throughout the book; from the construction of the monument to recollections elders had about gathering wild rice on Rice Lake and other practices and traditions.

WHAT WE HOLD DEAR contains more than 125 photographs in 128 pages.

Price: $17.95 paper.

Organization: Healing Our Spirit Worldwide

Title: Heartbeats of the Nations

Extraordinary Historic Event Scheduled - From Sunrise to Sunset, East to West, North to South, Aboriginal Drums will Reverberate

Muskoday, July 21, 2006 (NNW) – On August sixth, Aboriginal communities across North America will join together in a great chain of drumming to celebrate their healing achievements. The first chain of drumming will begin at sunrise and roll across the country until it reaches the west.

Communities may also choose to drum at other times during the day. As the drumming in one community ends, another community will begin. The last drum will sound at sundown. Métis communities will use their own heartbeat instrument, the violin.

Hundreds of people, including our incarcerated brothers and sisters are organizing themselves to participate in this great event, held in collaboration with healing our spirit worldwide and the National Native Addictions Partnership Foundation.

A large map of Canada will be posted on a screen at the Healing Our Spirit Worldwide Conference, where over 4,000 Indigenous people from Canada and the world will gather. As each drumming group begins, dots marking their location will appear on the screen.

Indigenous people from South and Central America, Hawaii, the rest of the US, Australia, the Islands of the Torres Strait, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, the Northern Hemisphere will also join from their communities and their delegates will bring their drums and other instruments to support this celebration.

EVIRONMENTAL

LANDFILL INFORMATION

Background:

In 1999, there was a proposal, to close the Tyendinaga Landfill Site. INAC provided a one time offer of $222,500.00, but it was conditional on our waste going to the Richmond Landfill Site. Tyendinaga Mohawk Council (TMC), at that time, opposed the Richmond Landfill Site Expansion, so it was evident not to accept the proposal offer. Since 1999, TMC has been lobbying INAC for funding for proper closure, in accordance to the Ontario Regulations, and Guidelines.

In May 2006, TMC passed a motion to close the embankment, and to implement a bin system, in an effort to eliminate a fast growth of an improper landfill. Since that time, we have observed an elevated amount of waste coming in. In comparison with neighbouring communities, Tyendinaga Territory is generating 6 times more garbage.

Why close TMT landfill?

As Keepers of the Earth, we have an obligation to ensure our Mother Earth is protected for the Seven Generations. It has been stated that the Tyendinaga landfill is not an appropriate area, because it is located on fractured limestone, has no liner, and is located close to Sucker Creek. Also, because there is an absence of adequate funding for equipment from INAC, there is a possibility of landfill activities negatively impacting the environment.

What will happen next?

Currently, there are new initiatives under consideration by the Mohawk Environment Committee and TMC. The current proposal under development for INAC consideration is opting for curbside pickup, for both waste, and recycling, full proper closure of the landfill site, and funding for annual maintaining. An area will still be maintained for Household Hazardous Waste, Scrap Metal, and Tires.

Vision Statement

Tyendinaga, as part of the Mohawk Nation, is a healthy, sustainable Kanienkeha community, built on and united by our language, culture, traditions, knowledge and history.

BREASTFEEDING CIRCLE

"If breastfeeding is free and is the safest way to feed babies, especially where water is scarce or unsafe, why are infant formula and baby food always so high on the list of relief items needed & being shipped to devastated areas during emergency situations? Isn't breastfeeding more critical than ever during disasters? Are there really so many babies orphaned or unable to be breastfed?"

WHY indeed!!! Breastfeeding can be the one life-saving thing that is available immediately, locally, and without interruption during emergencies and disasters. Some very young babies have even survived being buried in rubble for days by nursing from their mother who had passed away beside them. Babies have been nourished in concentration camps by undernourished mothers . . . or fathers! The donation and use of infant formulas may actually increase malnutrition, diarrheal disease and death. Which is why the World Health Organization recommends, "In emergencies, breastfeeding is the optimal and safest feeding method" and urges "to exercise extreme caution when planning, implementing or supporting emergency relief operations, by protecting, promoting and supporting breastfeeding..."

Dr. Anahit Demirchian reported, in response to the Armenian earthquake, "Our maternity hospitals were flooded with breastmilk substitutes [ie. formula] brought in by humanitarian aid agencies. This nearly destroyed our breastfeeding programs."

Some common myths about breastfeeding may contribute to the perceived "need" for formula use & donation during emergencies. . .

Myth # 1: Malnourished mothers cannot breastfeed

Myth # 2: Stress makes a mother's milk dry up

Myth # 3: Babies with diarrheal disease need water or tea or formula

Myth # 4: Mothers cannot resume breastfeeding if they have stopped

More information on "Myths about breastfeeding in emergencies" is available online at www.ibfan.org (see Working Groups), and at our local Breastfeeding Support Group meetings.

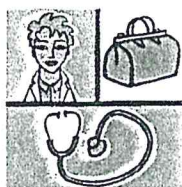

In any situations where babies are orphaned, where mothers are too ill or too injured and unable to breastfeed, or choose not to breastfeed, other feeding options in order of preference and safety are:

- 1) Mothers own expressed breastmilk
- 2) Wet-nursing, or nursing by another person who is already lactating or willing to bring in a milk supply for the baby
- 3) Locally available milks suitable for older infants and young children
- 4) Locally obtained commercial infant formulas may be used if conditions permit safe preparation, use, and storage (often not possible during emergency conditions)

These options and preferences apply to non-emergency situations as well.

First International FASDAY

September 9, 1999

In One Magic Minute, We Changed the World: 1999/9/9 9:09 am

In late February of 1999, a small group of burned-out parents, most of whom had never met face-to-face, set out to change the world.

We are parents of children with Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD), a group of disabilities caused by maternal drinking during pregnancy. FASD is now the leading cause of mental retardation in western civilization, one which could be totally prevented. FASD affects about 1 in 100 people in North America. (There are about 3 million people with FASD in the U.S., and 300,000 in Canada, most undiagnosed.) In Eastern Europe and countries of the former Soviet Union, the rate of undiagnosed FASD may be higher.

Our original volunteers were mainly adoptive and foster parents, plus a small but committed number of mothers in recovery, who have been working hard to inform and support other women with substance abuse problems. All of us lived daily with children whose prenatal damage caused mental retardation or learning disabilities, plus severe acting-out behavior that disrupted our lives and their classrooms, and often physical problems requiring much medical attention. For most of us, life revolved around our children's crises: most mothers had been forced to abandon any thought of full-time career.

Frustrated by the lack of public awareness of FASD by both public and professionals, we had sought help for our problems on the online support group, Fastlink, for two years or more. And on that February day, we began to wonder:

What if, on the ninth minute of the ninth hour of the ninth day of the ninth month of the year one thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine, we asked the world to remember that during the nine months of pregnancy, a woman should remain alcohol free? And, what if we also asked the world to remember those millions of people who will never fulfill their genetic potential, because of prenatal alcohol exposure? At this magic minute in history, could we begin to change the world?

And we began to work on it, building alliances, with only the help of the Internet. Our group grew to include about 70 volunteer coordinators in eight countries. Our northernmost volunteers are in Alaska, Yukon and Nunavut, our southernmost in New Zealand. We've had FAS Day proclamations from many cities and towns, and several U.S. states.

FASDay began in Auckland, New Zealand, where "Minute of Reflection" bells rang at 9:09 a.m., at Mt Albert Methodist church. Then it moved to Adelaide, Australia, and then to South Africa, where at 9:09 a.m., Cape Town volunteers gathered to hear the War Memorial Carillon that rang when Nelson Mandela was released from prison. Volunteers in Italy, Germany and Sweden held events – and then FASDay crossed the Atlantic. There were events in every time zone across Canada and the U.S., including ringing of carillons in Toronto, Niagara Falls, Hastings, NE, and Austin & San Antonio, Texas. The westernmost activity was the community breakfast on the tiny island of Kitkatla, B.C., near the Queen Charlotte Islands, where the village bell rang at 9:09 a.m. followed by prayers in the native tongue by village elders.

What is Parent Abuse?

Defining Parent Abuse

Parent abuse is difficult to define because it is not always clear when certain behaviours are "normal" and when they are "abusive." Conflict becomes abusive when one person uses threats, force or manipulation to gain power over the other. Parent abuse is any act of a child that is intended to cause physical, psychological or financial damage to gain power and control over a parent.

Teenagers normally go through a process of trying to establish their sense of separateness from their parents. This is called "individuating," and may at times include some defiance or resistance toward authority. There is a difference, however, between resistance and aggression, between separating from a parent and trying to take control of a parent, between "normal" teenage behaviour and "parent abuse."

Abusive adolescent behaviour ranges from mild to severe violence. Parents have to examine their teen's behaviour and determine whether it is acceptable or if it has become abusive. Abusive behaviour should not be tolerated. The abuse usually begins with verbal abuse. For most parents, the abuse is a daily occurrence that follows a pattern, usually with the child showing no signs of remorse or guilt.

Forms of Parent Abuse

Any behaviour that is deliberately harmful to the parent and used as a form of control may be defined as abuse. The abuse may be physical, psychological (including verbal) or financial. Here are some examples of the various forms of abuse:

Physical abuse

- hitting, punching, slapping or kicking
- shoving and pushing
- breaking things and/or punching holes in the walls
- throwing things
- spitting

Psychological abuse and emotional terrorism

- intimidating the parent, making the parent fearful
- maliciously playing mind games, trying to make the parent think he or she is crazy
- making unrealistic demands on parents
- purposely not telling the parent where they're going or what they're doing
- running away from home or staying out all night
- lying
- threatening to hurt, maim or kill the parent or someone else
- making manipulative threats, such as threatening to run away, commit suicide or otherwise hurt themselves
- degrading the parent or other family members
- withholding affection
- controlling the running of the household

Verbal abuse

- yelling
- arguing, challenging ("I don't have to do anything you say!")
- being sarcastic or critical, belittling
- laughing in the parent's face
- name calling
- swearing at the parent

Some adolescent behaviour is more irresponsible and thoughtless than abusive. However, in some cases, adolescents deliberately use psychological means to manipulate, control and hurt their parents.

Financial abuse

- stealing money or parent's belongings
- selling possessions, their own or the parents'
- destroying the home or parents' belongings
- demanding parents buy things they don't feel they can afford
- incurring debts the parents must cover (e.g. as a result of damage to or theft of others' property)

Who is the abused Parent?

Parental abuse can occur in any family and is not associated with social class, ethnic background, or sexual orientation. Although fathers are also susceptible, mothers are the most frequent victims of parent abuse. One of the reasons is that women are the primary caregivers. Often abused mothers are single parents. Elderly parents and parents with disabilities may be particularly vulnerable to abuse by their teenage children. Teenagers who abuse their parents may also abuse their younger siblings and/or family pets.

Profile of the Teen

Some abusive teens participate in socially deviant activities such as drug or alcohol use or criminal activities (shoplifting, fraud, break and enter, theft, violent crime and/or prostitution). When teens become involved in drugs or alcohol, parents sometimes notice a sudden, drastic change in their school work, relationships and behaviour. Sometimes youth who are abusive toward their parents have themselves been the victims of physical, sexual and/or emotional abuse. Some teens may not have been the direct victims of violence but may have witnessed it in their homes. It is recognized that children who witness violence, compared to children who have not witnessed violence are at a greater risk of developing behaviour problems, such as aggression with peers, non-compliance with adults, destructive behaviour, and conflict with the law.

The Effects

Most parents have difficulty accepting that their teenager is abusive and may deny the problem. They often feel depressed, anxious, and ashamed. They may also feel guilty for pressing charges against the child for the assault. Abusive behaviour also affects other children in the home. Parents may fear for the safety of the other children, as well as their own safety.

Breaking the Silence

To help families and stop parent abuse, we have to break the silence that surrounds it. Because parent abuse is still not recognized, it is often considered acceptable behaviour. The first step to ending the abuse is recognizing that it is abuse. After recognizing the abuse, parents need a safe place to talk about what they are experiencing. Talking about the abuse can have a profound impact on parents and can help break the isolation.

Some of the places you can turn to for support include: family and friends, support groups, counselling services, parent resource centers, women's shelter's and resource centers.

L-R Wilma Maracle (Treasurer and Altar Guild president), Gail Clement (Warden), The Rev'd Denis Mulliner (Chaplain to HM Chapel Royal Hampton Court Palace), The Rev'd Brad Smith (Deacon-in-Charge, Parish of Tyendinaga and HM Chapel Royal of the Mohawks), The Rev'd Canon Cyril Betts (Priest, Parish of Tyendinaga)

On Thursday 29 June, Christ Church, Tyendinaga had a very special visitor. The Reverend Denis Mulliner, Chaplain and Deputy Priest in Ordinary to Her Majesty's Chapel Royal at Hampton Court Palace, was in Canada for the funeral of a friend and made time to visit Her Majesty's Chapel Royal of the Mohawks.

We shared greetings from our respective congregations and then Father Mulliner was given a tour of Christ Church by Gail Clement (Warden), Wilma Maracle (Treasurer and Altar Guild president), the Rev'd Canon Cyril Betts (Priest) and the Rev'd Brad Smith (Deacon-in-Charge). Father Mulliner was especially interested in the historical connections between the Mohawk people and the Crown and was intrigued by the various gifts that illustrate them. For those of you who don't know, Christ Church is home to half of the historic Queen Anne Communion Silver, given in 1711 and divided between Tyendinaga and the Six Nations Reserve in Brantford in 1788; a triptych in the Mohawk language (with the Apostle's Creed, the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer) and a bell given by King George III; a royal coat of arms given by King George V; a Bible given by Queen Victoria and a chalice given by Queen Elizabeth II in 1984 to commemorate the coming of the United Empire Loyalists to Ontario and decorated with the clan symbols of the Mohawks at Tyendinaga.

After the tour and conversation, the parish presented Father Mulliner with two commemorative plates from Tyendinaga. One depicts Christ Church and the other depicts the Queen Anne Silver. He has promised to display them in his Chapel Royal to emphasise our fraternity with the Chapel Royal establishment in the United Kingdom. When this was completed, we drove to All Saints', Tyendinaga to have a quick tour of the Upper Church, which is blessed with a beautiful stained glass light in the vestibule that depicts the Tree of Peace and the Bear, Wolf, and Turtle clan symbols.

It was a delight to visit with Father Mulliner to learn about his experience of working in the Chapel Royal and to reinforce how we are always part of a Church that is much bigger than our local parish. Here, our Chapel Royal is a parish church where the designation comes from loyalty of the Mohawks in the American Revolutionary War. In the United Kingdom, Chapels Royal are where the Royal Family worship. We hope to see him again next summer when he returns for a vacation with his wife.

Thank You!!!!!!!

I would like to take this opportunity to let everyone know just how committed the staff at the Administration Office and the Health Centre are.

When they were needed, all we had to do is call and ask for some assistance and yes, they were there!!!!

I just wanted the community to know how much we need and should appreciate the wonderful job they do at the Administration Office and the Health Centre. They really do know what team support is all about!

Again, a big Nia:wen from the Sports Camp Staff and kids!

Especially, a big Nia:wen from the Summer Camp Coordinator Gail Balla.

POSTCARDS FROM THE VISION QUEST

by Joseph Brant

I'm coming home!!!! (for the pow wow)

By the time you read this, I'll probably be back here in Nashville. If, by chance, you read this before the pow wow, I'd ask you—in any other circumstance—to just look for the long-haired, overweight Indian, but—in this case—I'm hoping to bump into a couple more than just me. (With that in mind, I'll also ask you not to just walk up to people and say you're looking for "Mr. Brant").

These are the things we get used to when we live off the rez. We're so special and unique out here in the big, bad world, where the white people forget and think we're just like them, and the black people (don't forget, but) accept us as one of them.

I don't honestly believe I've ever been to the Tyendinaga pow wow. It was only a couple years in existence when I moved away ten-ish years ago. All this reminds me of the fair; I haven't been to the fair since, I think, 1997. Can you believe how long it's been since 1997?! Neither can I.

When I say "the fair" you know I'm talking about the Mohawk Fair, right? I just realized that—I assume we're all on the same page, and in all likelihood, we were.

Well I made it through the two-week trial period for the diet I mentioned last month, so I'm totally part of the study. Even better news: I'm in the group that gets to drink a glass of water before each meal (remember, the other two either drink a glass of grapefruit juice or eat a grapefruit before each meal).

Unfortunately, I'm realizing that drinking grapefruit juice or eating the grapefruit would've made me take the study a little more seriously. Water, as you know, is pretty much everywhere whether you're dieting or not. In years passed, when I tell myself I'm dieting I usually eat very little, exercise and lose 20 or 30 pounds very fast. Then I get tired of eating healthy and exercising so I stop it all—just as much a matter of cold-turkey this time—and gain it all back (plus more) within six months.

So this time I figured I'd do it slowly and...uh, more cognizantly because it's (as they say) a "lifestyle change" and not a diet. So essentially, I find myself still going to the Burger King and the McDonald's and exercising a tiny little bit and, every week, I just absolutely fall off my chair when I discover I've lost half a pound.

And I celebrate by going back to the Burger King and telling everybody it really wasn't all that hard.

It's sad and it's funny...but it's true. The ladies who work at my local Burger King know me. One of them said, the last time I was there, "Hey! We ain't seen you here in a couple days!" I was like, "uh, yeah, I'm trying to cut down." By no means, you should know, do I go there more than, maybe, once per week.

Which reminds me, and I know I've mentioned this before: I honestly truly feel like I walk through this world anonymously and that I blend in with any crowd, but my experience just doesn't agree.

People—service industry people in restaurants, stores, etc—will look at me when I come in and say, "Hey! How are you?" and then mention some minute detail about my last visit, one that even I barely remember, and I'll think, "I've only been here once and even I barely remember that."

There's a bar I go to—literally—once every three or four months and every single time I walk in, the bartender says, "Hey Joe! What'll it be?" and I think to myself "what in the world could I have done that would make you remember me?"

It's flattering, of course, but also a little scary: honestly, what could I have done?

My friend Matt owns a bar that I visit once every six months to a year and, every time I walk in, the same ol' bartender—who I barely recognize—says to me, after a few minutes have passed, "you used to work with Matt at the Wildhorse," and I'll think, "until now, I'd forgotten how I know him."

I've been visiting www.MySpace.com a lot recently. (You'll notice I really don't have much to say this month, so I'll just gossip from here on out.) I'm still not convinced My Space is something adults should use; I've always kind of operated under the assumption that it was only for musicians, teenagers and, of course, pederasts.

Still, I have a lot of friends who have My Space "pages" so, it turns out, this is really just an issue of mine and, by the time you read this, I'll probably have my own page. (Please. And my own band? Just as likely.)

For the uninitiated, the My Space website is a collection of individual web-pages created by ordinary ol' people like me and you (and musicians and pederasts, too) where you pretty much tell the world who you are, what your interests are, what kind of music, movies, TV shows you enjoy, what your sign is, and there's a section that you can update at any time with random information, thoughts, gossip, whatever. If this was around when I was a teenager, I'd been ALL into it. Hell, I probably would've come out ten years earlier. Anyway...

There's also this part where you link to other people (you're "friends") who have their own My Space pages and, for me, this is where it gets all dirty. And addictive.

I'll read through one person's page and, when I get to the list of his or her "friends," I tend to recognize names and faces of people I see out on the town but don't really know. So, of course, I follow the link and read everything about that person.

It makes me feel like a perv. Or a peeping Joe. Not that I'm benefiting at all from the information. Not that I'm benefiting even in a tiny little way, for that matter. I just feel like I'm infringing upon someone else's secrets that they're intending to only share with just the whole entire universe. See how weird that is?

So when I see someone out somewhere, my mind instantly goes back to their My Space page and I remember whatever that first impression was: "Ew! You don't know how to spell!" or I'll think something like, "You seem to be on there all the time—how did you find time to be here tonight...you know, in the real world?"

Then there are the ones where people are cryptically looking for someone to date, which really makes me feel dirty. These, as well, are the pages that fill me with laughter.

"Ew! You're looking for someone younger than you and you're only, like, 28." (See how quickly we get into pederast territory here?)

Or one of them will come up to me and say, "we met a few weeks ago. You're a friend of so-and-so, right?" and I'll think to myself, "I know all your secrets," and it makes me scared because: what if my real live friend told them all of mine?

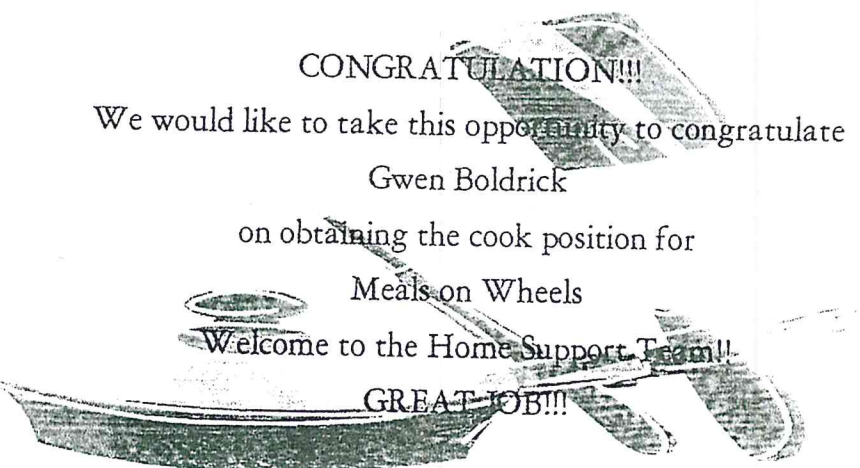

Okay, that's all I got this month. See you at home!
