'THE TIME TO PLAN A FUNERAL'

WHAT?

What is a Pre-arranged Funeral?

The pre-arranged funeral is an opportunity to carefully plan for an orderly conclusion to life.

It is not a difficult or complicated task.

Simply, pre-arrangement is a practical way of determining an individual's wishes for a funeral in advance. The pre-arranged funeral provides the opportunity to decide the type of services preferred and outline instructions for final arrangements.

If you are planning your own funeral, pre-arrangement can also serve as a guide to family and friends. That foresight can be invaluable in a time of stress.

It should be noted that any type of funeral whether simple or elaborate can be pre-arranged. Also remember that all it takes is a phone call to your local funeral home to arrange a convenient time to meet and discuss your own special wishes.

WHY?

What are the Advantages?

Most people plan for an orderly conclusion to life with a will, adequate life insurance benefits & pension plans. The pre-arranged funeral is part of this sensible planning.

The greatest advantage is that through pre-arrangement planning, choices can be made in a less emotional setting. These choices include the professional services required, the type of casket, suggestions for the funeral itself and the preference for earth burial or cremation.

When you discuss a pre-arranged funeral with a funeral director, it is your opportunity to ask questions and get clear answers. It is the time to determine what costs are involved. With this information in hand, intelligent, informed decisions can be made.

When death does occur, a period of adjustment begins for family. The pre-arranged funeral saves them the task of making important decisions on final arrangements during a time of emotional stress.

It is a practical idea that makes sense!

WHO?

Who Should Pre-arrange a Funeral?

Everyone should at least consider a pre-arranged funeral regardless of age or background. By and large, there are three groups of people who find it useful, even necessary, to pre-arrange a funeral.

The first group is made up of people who believe in planning for a funeral now, will save others the responsibility later. They may be providing guidelines to their survivors or alternatively, making arrangements for someone in their care.

Another group consists of people who have very specific details in mind about the funeral and services. They want to be sure that these wishes are recorded.

Details can range from who should be informed of the funeral and the type of music played, to special instructions for the disposition of the remains.

The last group are those with very practical reasons for pre-arrangement. They may be senior citizens entering a residential home, or those having no one capable or perhaps willing to make funeral arrangement at the time of death. For this group, it is a necessary way to bring an orderly conclusion to their affairs.

The type of people who make up these groups will vary and overlap. They will range from young marrieds, retired couples, to the single person with no family connections, or someone responsible for the care of others.

All realize that the time to plan for a funeral is now.

HOW?

Pre-Arranging a Funeral?

When you meet with the funeral director to discuss pre-arrangement there are two steps to the process. The first is the informal question and answer session where you begin to determine and understand your requirements.

Next is the more formal exchange of information and the recording of your pre-arrangement wishes.

Be flexible. You should think of your arrangements as suggestions that will assist those who will be involved at the time of death.

The planning process is really little more than a discussion with your funeral director. Think of it as an open and frank conversation in a relaxed environment. Trust and openness are integral parts of this relationship.

You may wish to carefully consider the type of arrangements you will require in consultation with family, friends, clergyman, and funeral director.

Your questions will be answered. Information exchanged. And the pre-arranged funeral is complete.

THE DANGER OF OVERPLANNING!

In your discussions, it should be remembered that plans for the funeral should also leave room for the wishes of close family members. Many take the attitude that the final decision should be made by the survivors, and that pre-arrangement is really only a guide.

Also consider that the major reason for the funeral rite is to allow the survivors the opportunity to meet their own emotions and psychological needs. Therefore, while the funeral is of the person who has died, it is for the survivors.

WHY PREPAY A FUNERAL?

There are no requirements to pre-pay when you pre-arrange a funeral but, you may wish to consider it.

You should know that monies which you pay to the funeral director are protected by provincial law. The Pre-arranged Funerals Act requires the funeral director deposit the funds in a trust account with a recognized financial institution (bank, trust company, credit union or Province of Ontario Savings office).

If you should move or decide to withdraw the plan, your money and interest earned is refunded, subject to a small administration fee specified by the above Act.

The White & Morris Chapel is pleased to provide you with the foregoing information regarding Pre-arranged funerals. Our office is as close as your phone and our staff would be pleased to assist you with discussion and information!
