SUBJECT: Shaping Canada's Future Together - Proposals

Sekon;

Greetings from the Hotinonsionni (Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy). We have reviewed Canada's latest constitutional proposals as outlined in the above-noted document. We have expressed our disappointment at Canada's continued paternalistic approach to relations between our respective peoples.

As you know, we are the traditional government of the Hotinonsionni. We operate according to our constitution, the Kaianerekowa (The Great Law of Peace), which was given to us by our Creator thousands of years ago. In the interest of peaceful co-existence, we established treaty relations with various nations, including the British Crown. Canada has consistently dodged this issue by trying to assimilate us instead of reaffirming and honouring these relations.

We wish to express to you, in the strongest possible terms, our solidarity with all indigenous peoples in rejecting all attempts to delegate to us what is inherently ours --- the right to self-determination.

We have extended an invitation to the Hon Joe Clark to attend a meeting at the Onondaga Longhouse, Grand River territory, tentatively scheduled for 10:00 A.M. on Saturday October 26, 1991. We extend to you the same invitation. We wish to share with you our vision of how peaceful co-existence may be restored, as well as outline the process we envision for our communities. Perhaps it will be possible to initiate a dialogue in order to better exchange information.

Should you require additional information, please do not hesitate to contact Mr. Thomas Longboat, secretary to the council.

SUBJECT: Shaping Canada's Future Together - Proposals

Sekon;

Greetings from the Hotinonsionni (Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy). We have reviewed Canada's latest constitutional proposals as outlined in the above-noted document. We are disappointed in your government's continued paternalistic approach towards relations between our respective nations. As you know, we are the traditional government of the Hotinonsionni. We operate according to our constitution, the Kaianerekowa (Great Law of Peace), which was given to us by our Creator thousands of years ago.

When the first Europeans arrived here, on the shores of the great Turtle Island, our people met them with open arms and hearts. We shared all we had, including that which is most sacred to us, the land. In the interest of peaceful coexistence we entered into solemn agreements, such as the Two Row Wampum and Silver Covenant Chain treaties. The principles entrenched in these documents include those of respect and the recognition, as distinct peoples, of our inherent right to self-determination.

The Hotinonsionni have no desire whatsoever to be governed now or in the future by the Indian Act, or by any other form of "Self-government" within the framework of the Canadian constitution. Your latest endeavours to arbitrarily include us in your government's constitutional process is viewed by the Hotinonsionni as threatening treaty relations.

We feel the time has come for us to meet in order that we may share with you our vision of how peaceful coexistence may be restored. We hereby extend an invitation for you to attend a meeting at the Onondaga Longhouse at the Grand River territory. We have tentatively scheduled this meeting for 10 A.M. on Saturday October 26, 1991. Should you require more information to facilitate the coordination of this meeting, please contact Mr. Thomas Longboat, secretary to the council.

Re: The Power of Having Two Languages

I read with much interest a Canadian Press article written by Portia Priegert, run by the Brantford Expositor on July 8, 1991, entitled: Bilingual bonuses cited as an irritant (see pg. 15). The article cited that the Citizens' Forum on Canada's Future, which talked to some 300,000 people about a range of national issues, found that a bonus given to public servants who speak both French and English was often singled out for criticism. This criticism is not unfounded for those of us working with First Nations languages on shoe-string budgets.

The bonuses are offensive when you compare, in total, the small amounts available for the maintenance and revival of First Nations languages. With the limited funds available to cultural centres for our languages, we must conduct research, develop instructional materials and hard literature, provide technical support and assistance to our communities for local language initiatives and provide, if we are lucky, an annual meeting of language professionals.

Yet federal employees are able to command a salary bonus just for stating that they are bilingual or have or are receiving training in a second official language, generally, at no cost to themselves.

The financial facts regarding this bonus are staggering:

- there are two official languages in Canada: French and English. Each federal employee receives an $800 bonus as an incentive to have a working knowledge of a second official language. There are 58,000 employees collecting this bonus each year. This costs the government $46,400,000 a year! The federal government has been paying this bonus for 14 years, therefore it has paid out $644,000,000, that is, over half a billion dollars since 1977!!!
- federal employees think the bonus should be doubled, making the price tag $92,800,000 per year.
- the federal government spends $300,000,000 a year on the French language.

How does one single language warrant such attention when many of Canada's Aboriginal First Languages are on the verge of extinction?

How do we gain access to those kinds of dollars for our language initiatives, research projects and programs?

How is one language more official than another when we supposedly are all equal under guarantees assured us within Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms?

Some Things to Consider

- We must change attitudes within our First Nations communities, political associations and national offices regarding use of our own languages.
- We must define how bilingualism should apply in our own communities, in other words, French/English, Native/English or Native/French.
- We must develop a 'nationalistic' approach when setting our agendas, conducting meetings and negotiating with federal and provincial levels of government.
- We must continue to discuss language inequalities and abuses with our local community leadership and the leadership within our provincial and territorial organizations, in turn they must do the same when speaking on our behalf to all levels of government.
- We must encourage our communities to adopt our languages as our National Languages and to develop strategic plans and incentives to encourage our very own First Nations civil servants to become bilingual (including annual bonuses).
- We must develop strategic plans and incentives for our very own cultural institutions' staffs to become bilingual in our languages including: full training allowances, leaves with full salaries and annual bonus structures for those staff members who are or become bilingual.
- We must make the Federal government recognize the fact that we are no less human in wanting to become bilingual on our terms.

Finally, on the eve of the 500th anniversary of Mr. Columbus' landing on our shores, we must realize that we might not survive the next 500 without our First Languages.

Gingivitis

21 Remedies to Stop Gum Disease

Once upon a time, maybe just last year, plaque was one of those medical terms the dentist threw around and you ignored.

The dentist would say, "Gotta brush and floss these teeth a little better. Lotta plaque on them."

You would say, "Uh huh. Sure. You're right." Then you would go home and brush and floss faithfully for a couple of days. But in a week or so the brushing and flossing would fall back to a lick-and-a-promise schedule that would last until your next dental appointment.

Today was different.

The dentist said, "Your gums are swollen and red. Today's cleaning made them bleed. You have gingivitis. And if you don't do something about it, you're going to lose your teeth."

Ooops. That 30-second lick-and-a-promise has caught up with you. You aren't alone. A survey reported in the Journal of the American Dental Association showed a majority of adults has early signs of periodontal disease. Gingivitis is the first sign of periodontal disease. And gum disease is the major reason adults lose their teeth.

But don't despair. There's some good news in that terrible your dentist just gave you. You are the one who can save your teeth. And the treatments aren't so hard. Here's what to do.

Don't just take 30 seconds anymore. If you want to get rid of gingivitis, you have to take time to floss and brush correctly. You're going to have to block out 3 to 5 minutes twice or three times a day for good oral hygiene, says Robert Schallhorn, D. D. S., Aurora, Colorado, dentist and past president of the American Academy of Periodontology.

Brush at the gumline. The plaque-catching area around the gumline is where gingivitis starts, and it is the most neglected area when we brush, says Vincent Cali, D.D.S., a New York city dentist and author of The New, Lower-Cost Way to End Gum Trouble without Surgery. Place your brush at a 45-degree angle to your teeth so half of your brush cleans your gums while the other half cleans your teeth. Then, snimmy your brush, don't scrape.

Have two toothbrushes. Alternate between them, advises Dr. Cali. Allow one to dry and air out while using the other.

Get a power tool. Studies show an electric rotary toothbrush typically removes 98.2 percent of plaque, versus 48.6 percent removed by hand brushing.

Bank some bone. Gingivitis is the beginning of what Dr. Cali calls periodontal osteoporosis. Just like the bones in the rest of your skeleton can shrink and get brittle, so, too, can your jawbone. Bolster your bones with plenty of calcium (found in dairy products, salmon, almonds, and dark greens), exercise, and a no-smoking policy.

Try a gum message. Grip your gums between your thumb and index finger (index on the outside) and rub, suggests Richard Shepard, D.D.S., a retired dentist in Durango, Colorado. He says this will increase healthy blood circulation to your gums.

Stock up on vitamin C. Vitamin C won't cure gingivitis, but it can help check bleeding gums, according to a study at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Western Nutrition Research Center in San Francisco, California.

MEDICAL ALERT

Ignore Them and They Will Go Away

What happens if you ignore the sore, bleeding gums that are a sign of gingivitis? You risk more serious periodontal disease and the possible loss of your teeth.

Here are the signs that warn you your gingivitis is getting more serious. If you have any of them, see your dentist.

1. You have bad breath that doesn't go away within 24 hours.
2. Your teeth look longer—a result of your gums shrinking away from your teeth.
3. Your mouth feels out of alignment when you shut it because your teeth come together differently.
4. Your partial dentures fit differently.
5. Pus pockets form between your teeth and gums.
6. Your teeth are loose or fall out.

Also, if your gums still bleed when you brush your teeth and continue to be sore and swollen despite your efforts at good oral hygiene, you need to see your dentist again.

Brandish a proxa brush. A proxa brush is a specially designed brush (available at most drugstores) that's shaped like a tiny bottle brush. It slides between your teeth or under your crown or bridge to reach those hard-to-reach places, says Roger P. Levin, D. D. S., president of the Baltimore Academy of General Dentistry.

Use Listerine. In a study reported in the Journal of Clinical Periodontology, Listerine mouthwash was proven to be effective in inhibiting the development of plaque and in reducing gingivitis.

Look at the label. When buying generic mouthwash, look for the chemicals cetylpridinium chloride or domiphen bromide on the label. Research shows these are the active ingredients in mouthwash that reduces dental plaque.

Examine your lifestyles. Too much stress? Too little relaxation? Do you work around toxic chemicals? Any of those factors can adversely affect your gums. Dr. Cali says people need to examine every aspect of their lifestyles to see what they might change to make living more healthy.

Cut your vices. Excessive smoking and drinking can drain your body of vitamins and minerals vital to a healthy mouth, says Dr.Cali.

Scrape your tongue. Remove the bacteria and toxins hiding there. Dr.Cali says it doesn't matter what you use to scrape with, as long as it isn't sharp. He recommends a demitasse spoon, a washed poker chip, a Popsicle stick, a tongue depressor, or your toothbrush. Scrape from back to front 10 to 15 times.

Take an intermission. Don't try to perform all these oral ablutions in one day. Massage your gums one day, scrape your tongue the next, says Dr.Cali. If you do something different after you brush and floss, you won't bore yourself to death.

Snuff it with H₂ O₂. Buy a 3 percent solution of hydrogen peroxide, mix it half-and-half with water, and swish it around your mouth for 30 seconds. Don't swallow. Use this wash three times a week to inhibit bacteria, says Dr.Cali.

Wash with an oral irrigation unit. Use an oral irrigation device to flush water around your teeth and gums, says Dr.Cali. To use it correctly, direct the stream of water between your teeth, not down into your gums.

Pack a portable irrigator. When you travel, carry an ear syringe (a rubber bulb with a long nose). Fill it with water, then flush your teeth, says Dr.Cali.

Use a gum stimulator. A rubber or specially designed triangular gum stimulator is better than a toothpick for massaging the gums, says Dr.Cali. It also cleans the surfaces between the teeth. Place the rubber point so it rests between two teeth. Point the tip in the direction of the biting surface until the stimulator is at a 45-degree angle to the gumline. Apply a circular motion for 10 seconds, then move on to the next tooth.

Eat a raw vegetable a day. It will keep gingivitis away, says Dr.Cali. Hard and fibrous foods clean and stimulate teeth and gums.

Try the baking soda and water solution. Take plain baking soda, mix it with a little bit of water, and apply it with your fingers along the gumline in a small section of your mouth. Then brush. You'll clean, polish, neutralize acidic bacterial wastes, and deodorize, all in one swoop, says Dr.Cali.

Say aloe to your druggist. Some people brush their gums with aloe gel, says Eric Shapira, D.D.S., a dentist in private practice in El Granada, California, and assistant clinical professor at the University of the Pacific School of Dentistry. "It's a healing agent and it will reduce some of the plaque in your mouth," he says.

PANEL OF ADVISERS

Vincent Cali, D.D.S., is a New York City dentist and author of The New, Lower-Cost Way to End Gum Trouble without Surgery. He also has a postgraduate degree in clinical nutrition from the Fordham Page Institute at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Roger P. Levin, D.D.S., is president of the Baltimore Academy of General Dentistry and a guest lecturer at the University of Maryland in Baltimore.

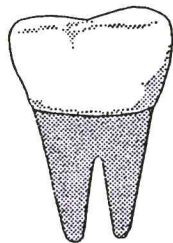

Robert Schallhorn, D.D.S., has a private practice in Aurora, Colorado, and is past president of the American Academy of Periodontology.

Eric Shapira, D.D.S., is in private practice in El Granada, California. He is an assistant clinical professor and lecturer at the University of the Pacific School of Dentistry in San Francisco, California, and has a master's degree in science and biochemistry.

COMMUNICATIONS

*Years ago it didn't matter if..
We only spoke our mother tongue
For we never strayed too far from home
Those days the world was young.*

*In modern times, we fly the skies
Maturity, has set us free.
Along with all this independence
We must learn-responsibility.*

*One universal language
Along with each nations tongue,
If taught in all the world schools
Would make communications fun.*

*We'd then be able to converse
And better understand,
Our neighbour, if he's from Tim-buk-tu
Or the "way down under land".*

*We could also have the option
To learn others (if we please)
But the onus, would be on us
To each pay his own fees.*

NEWS

YOUR WATER IS NOT

PURE SWEET ?

WHY ?

You have no treatment equipment.

You have equipment but still do not have PURE SWEET WATER.

Your water SMELLS leaving your fixtures BROWN and BLACK.

You can't stand the SMELL.

You have BACTERIAL CONTAMINATION and cannot drink the water.

Your water is very HARD and your clothes just will not come out white.

THERE IS A GUARANTEED ANSWER TO THESE PROBLEMS

You need what many people on the Tyendinaga Territory have.

A guaranteed PURE SWEET WATER SYSTEM.

DO NOT SETTLE FOR LESS

YOU DESERVE PURE SWEET WATER
